Restore Tariffs on British Goods

OTTAWA, (CP)—Canada's British preferential tariff schedule, many items of which were reduced or removed altogether during the war, will be restored to its pre-war basis June 30, Finance Minister Abbott announced Saturday.

The move is being undertaken, Mr. Abbott said, to permit Canada to negotiate on the basis of its normal peacetime tariff structure at the resumed sessions of the international conference on trade and employment at Geneva April 8.

Purpose of the Geneva discussions among 17 governments is to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements directed toward substantial reduction of tariffs.

The minister said that the Canadian government has advised the United Nations it will negotiate, both as to preferential and most-favored-nation rates, on the basis of the tariff as it existed July 1, 1939.

The British preferential rates were cut in 1940. At that time, to conserve American dollars for essential purchases in the United States, Canada imposed import restrictions against non-essential goods entering the country from the U.S.

To offset shortages this move might create, the minister reviewed the tariffs standing against the sterling funds.

About half of all items in the tariff list coming into Canada from the United Kingdom were allowed to enter free of duty. Another half, the preference items, were placed on a list of goods to which a 50 per cent duty was applied.

The reductions were made under the War Measures Act, which remained in effect until they were withdrawn by order-in-council. The order-in-council, Mr. Abbott said, has now been passed giving effect to the date for their termination.

By that time, the minister said, it is hoped "substantial progress will have been made in the trade discussions."

He added future tariff relations with the United Kingdom and with other countries at the trade conference will depend on the outcome of the Geneva talks, at which an international trade charter is to be drafted.

U.S. Food Prices Start to Decline

CHICAGO, (AP)—The American household's food budget finally has started down.

For the first time since war-time prices peaked in 1945, retail food prices are being marked down by a cost-of-living survey of representative cities showed Saturday.

Chicago, which has been sharply on the Chicago wholesale market and registered declines on the New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles markets, was among the list of major food items falling in price.

One company announced that prices would be reduced five cents a pound in its Chicago and Detroit area stores and three cents in New York City. Most other cities reported a steady decline in butter prices since December 1945.

Food wholesalers in Chicago said the only major commodity still showing an upward price trend was coffee. Price reductions have been made at the retail level in numerous cities on lamb, fresh and canned meats, canned citrus fruit, dates and dried peaches and dried apples, they added.

Price boards shown in Ottawa said there was a parallel in the Canadian situation.

"Actually all food prices in Ottawa said that 'the day of sharp increases in food prices is over.' Many predicted numerous other declines would be in evidence when the summer pack of canned goods comes on the market.

One food wholesaler said large canned goods inventories by both wholesalers and retailers were forcing price markdowns in many cities.

Jobless Insurance Claims Show Drop

OTTAWA, (CP)—Claims for unemployment insurance benefits in December were fewer than in the same month of 1945, the department of statistics reported Friday.

While a seasonal increase was shown from August, the November total of 27,111 was a drop of more than 10,000 from the 37,235 of 1945 and an increase from October of 24,891.

Official claims on the live unemployment register on the 1st of November totalled 7,767 compared with 57,508 at Oct. 31, 1945 and 57,444 at Oct. 31, 1944.

During November, 61,875 persons received one or more benefit payments totaling $2,354,541 as compared with $2,463,477 for the same month of 1945.

This compares with $2,344,631 for the same month of 1944, and $2,189,926 for the same month of 1943.

One new regulation provides that the four-tenured limit must be applied to full control in the worst condition of engine failure at take-off—a failure of two engines on one side. Less Frequent Overhauls Aim for British Airplanes

LONDON, (AP)—Royal Tuxford II airplanes will go into service on British airlines in 1947. These are four-engine aircraft using the wings of the Lancaster bomber. This feature they share with the smaller-bodied and therefore faster Tuxford I. Both are representative of the British innovations in the commercial field, after six years in service between Preville and Montreal.

The stringent standards of the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization (PICAO) approved this week, necessitated some modification of both craft.

One new regulation provides that the four-engine limit must be applied to full control in the worst condition of engine failure at take-off—a failure of two engines on one side. The danger is that the liner will swing away toward the two down engines, causing a similar condition unless full control and rudder control are powerful enough.

THIS IS HOW RUSSIA REARS HER LIVES

(By John Lawrence)

CLOTHES

Everybody in Russia seems to be able to get enough warm clothes to wear in winter.

I have known in war-time people who were not left without a warm coat or winter footwear, but somehow the problem always seemed to be solved before the cold weather set in.

The cheapest form of winter wear for men and women alike is a dark-colored, short overcoat made of wadded cotton wool. This is warm and light, but ugly.

It goes very easily, but it does not matter much because as soon as winter sets in properly there is a perpetual hard frost and no rain.

POORER RUSSIANS wear the traditional felt boots, which are very warm and comfortable once you get accustomed to them, but do not keep out the wet when the thaw sets in.

They do not wear socks with them, but wrap their feet round with rags, which they dispose very cleverly.

The poorer women wear shawls on their heads and the men waded caps, with flaps to come down over the ears.

BUT ANYONE who can afford it likes to have a sheepskin or fur coat and a fur hat. These often get grubby, and they take up a great deal of extra space in crowded trains. But when there is enough good fur to go round, the streets of Moscow in winter will present a gay spectacle.

Office workers in the towns do not wear felt boots, but ordinary shoes with goulashes. These keep one warm and make it easier to slip on the snow.

The babies are always tightly swaddled — necessary if ever they have kicking off covers might result in fatal falls.

It is amusing to see babies carried around in the streets. They are put on a small embroidered cushion being folded up over their feet, the other lying behind the head. The rest of the edifice is in their folded up arms, and the baby is secured by a strong wound around this cushion and flapping round the neck.

SOMETIMES a ribbon is tied around the neck and the whole outfit is finished off with a large bow tied under the baby's chin. But the result is to make the baby completely immobile. Only its eyes can move, and these roll wildly round as the child lies in its mother's arms.

Foreigners who have babies in Moscow and want to take them home have to defer to this custom of swaddling a child. One Canadian member of the foreign colony who had gone visiting with his wife and child was seen to be carrying the baby upside down. He was carrying the roll which contained his offspring conveniently under his arm and did not notice which way up it was.

Knowing their climate, Russians keep their warm wear on till spring is well advanced. The one day just as the trees come out there is a wonderful change from fur hats and shawls, wadded coats and felt boots to no hats, bright linen dresses and no stockings.

EVERY WOMAN looks ten years younger, and the children pick the garlands in their hair.

In the summer many men wear collared cotton shirts, dark trousers and canvas shoes, without puttees. Often they omit the shirts and wear just a sleeveless cotton vest with their trousers.

Retired men, if they are not in uniform, wear white linen suits. The traditional Russian embroidered shirt is rare in Moscow, but fairly common in the provinces.

Shoes are of poor quality and hard to get. Under the fourth Five Year Plan it is intended to produce by 1950 "trader more than" one pair of footwear every year and three pairs of stockings or socks a year for each member of the population.

RUSSIAN WOMEN are as interested in their appearance as Western women, but the material means have been lacking. Indeed, there is no definite standard of fashion, and people wear what they have until it wears out.

Color and fastidiousness are the qualities most sought after by young women. They like to make frills and elaborate for indifferent cutting, and wear colored ankle socks with their court shoes. Flannelled "tennis" shoes are most unpopular with the girls; like shoes with high heels and are brightly colored as possible.

Ray Oakman, who was a member of my staff in Moscow, says they are "at the stage of fashion evolution associated with the square beret collar and clock clock shoes."

HATS ARE RARE, and there are few women in Moscow who can carry off a smart hat. The penalty for failure is to be followed round by jeering children.

"SOCIETY LADY" exists in Moscow only in an embryonic form, but there are young ladies who prefer to do extra work and to work and to spend most of their resources on having a good time.

It requires only a little more than the average to be disappointed when Mrs. Churchill, on her visit to the Soviet Union, was nothing but a Red Cross woman so that there was no occasion for a display of covetous dress.

Like most people, the Russians are conservative in their notions of what is suitable attire, and they think some of our clothes very queer and but waste although the excellent public baths certainly have a public distinction.

SHORTS ARE UNKNOWN except for children. The sight of shorts on the streets is the rank of the ten General Montgomery wearing shorts on the film always brought the house down.

In the cities of Soviet Russia there is acute overcrowding. Conditions, of course, differ greatly from place to place. The worst was in some of the Urals towns, where at times during the war people had to sleep as tight as they could be packed. This was part of the price paid by the Soviet people for the successful evacuation of their factories.

Russia has always attracted population because it is the capital, and housing conditions there are not so good as in the rest of the country. There are some good modern buildings, but not nearly so many as in the rest of the country.

Although many people live in very sordid conditions, it is remarkable how clean and self-respecting most of them emerge. Very often one finds a black room, or a room constructed on the basis of three or four rooms with a bathroom and kitchen to the family.

In present circumstances, however, a separate family gets shoved into each room, so that several families have to share the kitchen and bathroom.

Privacy is thus out of the question, but it does not seem to be missed. Most people get on well enough, though there are always black baths, although there always seems to be one black sheep who loves the kitchen dirty and stores in the kitchen.

In one instance a family insisted on keeping a cock and hen in the kitchen, the great annoyance of the other inhabitants of that flat.

There is no uniform standard of living. At the top of the scale are the people like the late Alexis Tolstoy, the most famous author of his day. He drew royalties from his books and plays and had a very handsome income. The taxation such a person pays is much lower than our tax-draw, and the Russians do not seem to feel that this should be so. It is felt that he has earned his money by public service, and most people see no reason why the State should take away from him in taxation.

ALEXIS TOLSTOY had a town house and a country house, with good furniture and pictures, and a car. He always had a car with chauffeur, and at his country house, he had a large garden and a park.

Before his death he was planning to build a new house, and he bank to an attractive brick house. His country house was a two-story wooden building with several bedrooms, ample reception rooms and all conveniences.

Other well-known writers lived in modest houses throughout the country. A typical building writer would have a three-roomed flat in Moscow with rather heavy old-fashioned furniture and a "dacha," or country house, at Pskov, or somewhere in the north of Russia. The Union of Soviet Writers has a list of these houses, and these can have their country cottages.

THESE DACHAS are well built, rooms and furniture comfortable, although many improvements in the way of electric heating and plumbing still remain to be installed.

Hummer professional workers live in one room, which may be very comfortable, but it is not so. In the absence of paint and materials it is impossible for them to have any definite scheme of color or furnishing.

Many of them are small, but the best, invariably specially

Clothing, Housing Situation Inside The Soviet Today

Does the gay spectacle of furs to be seen in Moscow in wintertime truly reflect the clothing situation in Soviet Russia today? And what about the housing picture? Are the Russians as hard pressed for accommodation as the people of other lands? In The Edmonton Bulletin today John Lawrence continues his revealing series "This Is How Russia Really Lives" with a detailed account of how the Soviets are clothed and how they are housed. He tells frankly of the views and "eccentricities" of the Russian women on clothing, who like their western sister, lean to Dame Fashion, but have neither the money nor the materials to carry out their whims. He also discloses that during the strenuous days of war and despite great hardships, all people of the Soviet Union were warmly clothed in the winter, although everything was used for this purpose—even rags. Clothing for the most part is still of poor quality in Russia, but Lawrence tells here how the republics are constantly striving to better the situation and improve the lot of their peoples.

HOUSING

economic elbow room for them to live with our own young ladies. After all, good taste in clothes is largely a matter of money. The Russian girls are keen to learn, and if their taste is sure, that is mostly from lack of practice.

THERE ARE private dressmakers in Moscow and various State dressmaking establishments. But isolation from the West has probably had a worse effect on this branch of culture than any other.

There are measure shops in all centres and the "park-maker" or hand-purse, as great a part in feminine life in Russia as here, but the standard of taste is deplorable. I never could take with me the unscarred-for appearance of the Russian girls' hair, but I return to my own country.

The Russian girls never wash their hair, but the standard of taste is deplorable. I never could take with me the unscarred-for appearance of the Russian girls' hair, but I return to my own country.

I am told that the trouble is that, for all their visits to the hair-dressers, the Russian girls never wash their hair. They believe that if they did it would fall out.

"RUSSIAN PERMS" are said to be drastic. There are no regular yearly fashions in hair styles any more than there are in clothes. I had realized how much our sense of life owed to small things, to the fact that they were in line.

Russian girls make up and use lipstick. They are particular about shades, but it is far from known. Ray Oakman told me.

Cosmetics are in very short supply and of very poor quality. Face powder is pale, thick and cheap. Lipsticks are rarely obtainable and most women use cheap quality.

The theatrical people are quite well supplied with cosmetics, but the ordinary Russian girl is not.

HENCE THE PASSION for nail varnish, which is very scarce and was easily available. Russian teachers and housewives in the provinces are interested in cosmetics.

In 1945 the first fashion show since the beginning of the war was held in Moscow. This is how Ray Oakman told me.

The show was to be an exhibition of models designed for subsequent mass-production. Each republic of the Soviet Union had a representative, and the garments were for competition. The models were dressed in the most popular styles, but the show was marred by mannequins at a further show.

The garments, submitted varied, often strikingly, according to their designer. Some were in the style of the 1920s, some were in the style of the 1930s, some were in the style of the 1940s, some were in the style of the 1950s, some were in the style of the 1960s, some were in One of "Priceless Resources" Water Conservation Plans are Outlined

Water is Canada's priceless resource but a vast program of conservation must be undertaken if the Dominion is to realize the full potential of its innumerable water resources. J. P. MacNicol, MP for Toronto-Davenport, declared in an address to the Edmonton branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada in Merrick's Embassy Room Friday night.

MR. MACNICOL said that as a private member of the House of Commons he was giving his full support to development of the Saskatchewan river basin, a huge but fully practicable project, or number of projects, to conserve and regulate river flow for irrigation of 30,000 new acre-crops farms in Southern Alberta and southern Saskatchewan. In addition, there are from 20 to 30 ideal sites for hydro power dams on the source streams in the foothills that would furnish cheap electrical energy to established communities.

THE COMPLETE hydrological data would result in 30,000 additional self-supplying settlers on the irrigated lands and in surrounding communities and towns, the speaker said.

The primary objective of the program would call for the conservation of the waters of the Saskatchewan river basin, its food-laden source streams in adequate reservoirs. At the present time floods rage through the river valleys in the winter months and the precious water is lost without bringing relief to the dried-out areas of Southern Alberta and Western Saskatchewan.

THE PROGRAM also would entail reforestation of the burned-over Rocky Mountain slopes. There are several fine power sites on the North Saskatchewan river, one being about 70 miles west of Edmonton at the junction of the Brazeau and North Saskatchewan Rivers.

The reforestation phase of the program is an essential must if the strength of the mountain source streams is to be maintained, Mr. MacNicol said.

A small start has been made on the program, through letting of the contract for the Spring Coulee dam on the St. Mary river, a source stream of the Saskatchewan.

WHEN THIS PROJECT is completed, along with necessary complementary reservoirs and canals, south of Lethbridge, 300,000 acres of topsoil will have been reclaimed for production of crops.

Endorsement of McGregor Lake reservoir containing the flood waters of the Bow and other reservoirs will bring 233,000 acres into production.

A program on the Red Deer river at Buffalo Lake and east of it will permit reclamation of 500,000 more acres.

These plans would result in 1,000,000 acres being reclaimed in Alberta that could be reclaimed, he said.

DAM ON THE South Saskatchewan river below the mouth of the Bow would result in 2,000,000 acres being put into production in Saskatchewan.

Mr. MacNicol paid high tribute to the work of the Saskatchewan branch of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, as a man who has a great deal to say for Western Canada.

He said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's vision of ships sailing from Winnipeg to Edmonton was something that could come to pass but action is required to make the dream come true.

streams is to be maintained, Mr. MacNicol said.

A small start has been made on the program, through letting of the contract for the Spring Coulee dam on the St. Mary river, a source stream of the Saskatchewan.

WHEN THIS PROJECT is completed, along with necessary complementary reservoirs and canals, south of Lethbridge, 300,000 acres of topsoil will have been reclaimed for production of crops.

Endorsement of McGregor Lake reservoir containing the flood waters of the Bow and other reservoirs will bring 233,000 acres into production.

A program on the Red Deer river at Buffalo Lake and east of it will permit reclamation of 500,000 more acres.

These plans would result in 1,000,000 acres being reclaimed in Alberta that could be reclaimed, he said.

DAM ON THE South Saskatchewan river below the mouth of the Bow would result in 2,000,000 acres being put into production in Saskatchewan.

Mr. MacNicol paid high tribute to the work of the Saskatchewan branch of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, as a man who has a great deal to say for Western Canada.

He said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's vision of ships sailing from Winnipeg to Edmonton was something that could come to pass but action is required to make the dream come true.

There are several fine power sites on the North Saskatchewan river, one being about 70 miles west of Edmonton at the junction of the Brazeau and North Saskatchewan Rivers.

The reforestation phase of the program is an essential must if the strength of the mountain source streams is to be maintained, Mr. MacNicol said.

To Reduce Farm Accidents

Financial Aid Is Sought For Alberta Safety Council

In the interests of reducing the number of farm accidents which annually account for many casualties as well as fatalities, the provincial government will be asked by the Alberta Farmers' Union to provide financial assistance to the Alberta Safety Council in its educational campaign against costly mishaps. It was decided Friday evening by unanimously approved resolution.

HOWARD STUTCHBURY, ASCU chairman, spoke on the matter to nearly 1,000 delegates attending the AFU convention, in its fourth day in the Towers building.

Mr. Stutchbury pointed to the grievous annual loss to agriculture of some of its best representatives through accidents which, if sufficient care had been taken through off-hours study, would likely never have happened.

He outlined the purposes of the organization which he represented and urged all delegates to get behind the new well launched movement to rid the farm of many of its avoidable accidents.

WHEREAS THESE ACCIDENTS are responsible for the loss of life as well as suffering and economic loss through bodily injury, and whereas it has been demonstrated that safety campaigns are effective in preventing accidents, the resolution, which, asking the government for grants to carry on the work of the ASCU, was endorsed unanimously by the delegates.

Accomplishments, Hopes Outlined

Review of Conference Given by Dr. McNally

Accomplishments of the recent United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization meeting in Paris to which he was a delegate, were reviewed by Dr. G. Fred McNally, chancellor of the University of Alberta, and former deputy minister of education in his address to the delegates.

He also spoke along similar lines at a meeting at the University of Alberta on Friday night. He outlined the purposes of the organization which he represented and urged all delegates to get behind the new well launched movement to rid the farm of many of its avoidable accidents.

THE MEETING was called to order by H. E. Spencer, Edgerton, president of the Alberta School Trustees Association, who was named president of the newly-formed Alberta Educational Council at a meeting of interested educational, civic and provincial groups at the Masonic Temple Friday afternoon.

At the same meeting in January, 1946, the basic resolution of the group—that the provincial government accept more responsibility in education and defray half of the education costs in Alberta—was endorsed. The meeting this year was called to reiterate that resolution, and to form a permanent body aiming to carry this resolution to success.

AT THE meeting Friday, the name was chosen, a constitution approved and accepted, officers named and the objectives of the organization approved.

Other positions on the executive are filled as follows: vice-president, Dr. H. E. South, secretary-treasurer, John W. Barnett.

To serve on the executive committee were Mrs. E. C. Buxton, who has taken a prominent role in educational work here, and John Wheatley, Chancellor, Alberta rural municipalities.

THE OBJECTIVE of the council is as follows: "To arouse public interest and co-operation in education for the promotion and implementation of legislation relating to all phases of elementary and secondary education in Alberta."

Other major objectives are to prepare and publicize treatises and proposals designed to assist school boards in providing a greater measure of equality of educational opportunity to the school children of Alberta.

British Machines, Tools Preferred

Canadian industrial shops indicate a "nationalistic" preference for British machines and machine tools. E. A. Elmore, director of B. Elliott Co. Ltd. machine tool manufacturers of Wilkesboro, London, England, said here Saturday.

MR. ELMORE is making a coast-to-coast tour on behalf of general repair shops in major Canadian cities for the purpose of ascertaining the requirements for machine tools.

The company did a large export business with Canada prior to the last war and is in a position to export its complete product for demonstration purposes.

A BETTER VOLUME of machine tools for export should be forthcoming, he said.

Sunday Services in Edmonton Churches

Has Regular Congregation City's Negro Church Steadily Improved

By HELEN FERRIS

Under the stimulating leadership of the Rev. Donald Fairfax, a transformation has taken place recently in Shiloh Baptist Church where Edmonton's only Negro congregation worships.

ORGANIZED MORE than 40 years ago, the church has a regular congregation of 80 with some 200-400 parishioners in the widely scattered districts of Calgary, the South Side, and North Edmonton. The present sanctuary, located at 150 street and 105 avenue, was originally a blacksmith shop, but in the past two years, under the guidance of its first regular pastor, Mr. Fairfax, who will begin a new year in the church, improvements have been made to create a more church-like effect. The windows and doors have been arched, a new lighting system was installed and the interior finished in varnished plywood beamed with white-painted walls. The seating capacity has been enlarged to approximately 250.

A VESTIBULE has also been added through the sitting for finishing has not been available. A gas system has been installed for heating and a back room will be fitted out later as a club room.

Mr. Fairfax has indicated his commendation of the spiritual enthusiasm and energy with which Mr. Fairfax has imbued his congregation.

The Shiloh Baptist Young People's Union of some 20 members, for instance, sought new outlets for the church, helped to install new lighting and with the aid of the Sunday school helped to buy a new altar. They also donated $15 of the $200 raised by putting the congregation's supper to pay off the debts of the church property. They, who the choir was performing for funds for grown-ups, the young people contributed $25 to the fund.

THE 19 COIT paid from a Junior League fund, and the choir, which is frequently performing on programs with the senior choir, the senior choir of 19 women, organized by Mr. Fairfax about 18 months ago, have been studying sacred music under his direction.

TODAY'S MESSAGE

True Greatness

"Not the blood of all the thousands," it was once said, "can redeem one slave, or convert one sinner. The thousands of humble men awaited, toiled, and died in the days of Egypt's power that the might of her rulers might be known forever. But the fame of the pharaohs is dust today, and history sees in the great pyramids mere monuments to the colossal folly of human dynasties. A modern counterpart was the empire that Nazism sought to build upon a foundation of death, misery and degradation.

The salutary lesson of experience is that men cannot be truly exalted or ennobled by human honors or tributes. Greatness in a man comes from the things inside him—from the virtues of courage, fortitude, purity, and charity that may never win the acclaim of his fellows but which adorn him in the sight of God. The man who is fit to mark as lord of the earth is the man who seeks, in the words of St. John, "the glory which is from God alone."

Since greatness is only in the soul it follows that the standards of the world can never be the standards of God. If man would be measured by the yardstick of Christian perfection, they must seek the things that the world often despises.

They must follow the teachings of sanctity, which lead to real greatness. They must realize that they have found expression in the lives of thousands of men and women whose fame and glory is eternal, while the pomp and splendor of the powerful of their time are vanishing and forgotten. Each man is born for greatness, but it is a Christian paradox that the highest pinnacles are reached by those who walk in the valleys of humility.

Christian Science

The theme of the lesson-lesson at the Christian Science churches on Sunday will be "Sacraments." It will be elucidated in passages like these: "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." (Psalms 23:23-24). "We are to know ourselves and learn what is the affection and purpose of the heart, for in this way only we learn what we honestly are." (Science and Health with Key in the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 8).

The Dark Continents of Your Mind

DO YOU struggle for balance? Are you forever trying to maintain energy, enthusiasm, and the will to do? Do you personality and point of view as complement and flow-like a stream controlled by some unseen power? Deep within you are the organs of your emotions. They govern your creative ideas and reactions, even your enjoyment of life. Once they were thought to be the mysterious seat of the soul—and to be left unemployed. Now cast aside superstition and learn to direct intelligently these powers of self.

New Year's Thoughts

Let us walk softly, friend:
For strange paths lie before us all untrod.
The New Year, spiced from the hand of God,
Is close and mine, O friend.

Let us walk straightly, friend:
Forget the crooked paths behind us now,
Press on with steady purpose on our brow,
To better deeds, O friend.

Let us walk gladly, friend:
Slight not the heart-rose blossoming round our feet,
The Laurel blossoms are not half so sweet,
Or lightly gathered, friend.

Let us walk kindly, friend:
We cannot see how long this life shall last,
How soon these precious years be o'erpast;
Let Love walk with us, friend.

Let us walk quickly, friend:
Work with our might, while lasts our little day,
And help some halting creature on the way,
And may God guide us, friend.

Young People's Column

Miss Naomi Falkenberg, president of the Baptist Young People's Union of Western Canada, will leave for Saskatoon on Wednesday morning to attend the annual convention in charge of the young people's group at the Saskatoon hotel.

Next Saturday, January 18, members of the "Interdenominational" bowling league will enjoy a night's rest at the annual bowling convention from 7-9 p.m. It is expected that 100 members will be present. The league was organized by the Edmonton branch of the National Industrial Association, an eight-year-old organization for the advancement of Negroes. Last June he reorganized the local unit and hopes within the next six months to unite similar groups across Canada whose purpose is to encourage higher education among negroes and help colored people through unionism. Recently, the local unit, which consists of 25 men and women, donated $25 to a special fund for this purpose, and also to help others of their race to fit themselves for industrial trades. Fees and donations, voluntary and solicited, provide funds for this work.

IN ADDITION to his Edmonton charge, Mr. Fairfax ministers to the congregation at Wildwood, making one trip a month and staying two or three days. He conducts services in the school house, since there is no church and materials are not yet available for building. However, his people hope to build a new sanctuary there in the near future, and the women are already working toward it by raising funds through pie socials.

Last November the young pastor walked seven miles in the cold to minister to the Wildwood congregation, which he organized 18 months ago. His services averaged an attendance of 60 as his parishioners are scattered over a wide rural area.

In September he started a BYPU there, and in 1959 he also organized a CGIT group and appointed as its leader the negro school teacher, Miss Ruby Bradford.

Mr. FAIRFAX is a well known minister in Edmonton for his musical ability for his ministry, having appeared on many concert and radio programs as vocal soloist, and also as a competitor in Alberta music festivals, where he has won several awards.

Premier Gives Address

Dedication of Bibles Is Made at Ceremony

BY HELEN FERRIS

More than 200 persons were present at the Masonic Temple Thursday night for the dedication ceremony of 1955 New Testaments donated by the Gladson Society to the city of Edmonton.

Premier Ernest Manning delivered the dedication address, stating that the Scriptures declare that Christians must and should be the trustees of the Word of God and as such it is their responsibility to pass on the Word to children.

The premier then cited six points: (1) establish and prove the truth of the inspiration, the integrity and precision, its literary style and diction, its complete and perfect rationality and its literal expositiveness of fulfilled prophecy, and maintain its spiritual character.

IN CONCLUSION, Mr. Manning stated that it is not enough to believe in the Bible, but to have it in the hands of the children. The Bible declares that Christians are not only the trustees of the Word of God, but also the trustees of the Word of the children.

Mr. Manning also stated that it is not enough to believe in the Bible, but to have it in the hands of the children. The Bible declares that Christians are not only the trustees of the Word of God, but also the trustees of the Word of the children.

A CHAMPION

MOST of the Teenie Weenies believed that Gogo was the champion Teenie Weenie roller skater, but a few of the little people thought the Dunce was just as good. The Dunce loudly agreed with those few, and he did considerable boasting about his skating.

"You can't prove your skating ability by talkin'," said the Turk after listening to the Dunce's appreciation of his own skating. "If you want to decide who is the champion skater you'll have to hold a race."

The idea of a roller skating race appealed to the little folk and they set about making arrangements. They dragged a big cardboard box cover under some bushes for a rink and Gogo and the Dunce went into training. They skated every spare minute in order to get themselves in condition for the contest. The Dunce announced that he was going on a strict diet in order to be fit for the race. He didn't eat a single doughnut in over a week, which was a great surprise to the Teenie Weenies because the Dunce almost never denies himself anything in the way of good food.

A day was set for the race, but before it could be held a great storm covered the rink with snow. It was then decided to hold the race in one of the big houses whose owners were usually away during the day. One morning the Teenie Weenies went to a house on the lane, but they found the floor was too rough for Teenie Weenie roller skating. Then they climbed up onto a dining table that stood in the room. There were a number of dishes on the table, including a big plate which the Teenie Weenies decided would make a fine track for the race.

While the Dunce and Gogo put on their tiny skates, the Sailor scraped up some dried egg yolk from the plate and made a mark on the rim. "Now you fellows get ready," said the Sailor. "The first man to cross this egg mark after skating around the rim of the plate 10 times will be the champion."

After several false starts, the race finally got under way. The little skaters fairly flew around the plate, and each time one of them passed the egg mark, the Sailor, who was sitting in the center of the plate, made a mark on a tiny piece of paper.

It was a mighty close race for a few rounds, but finally Gogo pulled ahead and won by half a plate. To everyone's surprise, the Dunce seemed happy.

"Oh, boy! I'm glad this race is over," he grinned. "Now I'm through dieting and I'm gonna fill up on doughnuts." He hurried home and ate every last crumb in the doughnut thimble.
